I met you there. to your joy we came to pass a needle and the needle came to pass our skin within the thin beginning. bridged and forgotten, we carried down the soil a space away from time the raveged horizonland, the current a slow beam of light away from the sluice of water refracting back from the terrible ripcurrent. the strewed substances were still afternoon seeping slowly thru branches that formed fully and easily in their weight, a blackfish deafness that stranded sound between two barriers, two posions of prosperity.

the fleeting light retreated to sound as what we once knew became what we licked and touched and fucked and held the way things work is by admitting they open and close. move them thru impulse. believe they are there. graft them until randomness admits chance has made them invisible. snap them closed, on the verge on being anarchic, whipped white and nameless among the opportunistit, letting it touch you and weigh what you're worth. I believe now that sorrow is one more name for death and while I hope there will be no shadows light casts doubt on my mind and the bridge topples, the bird
