

Why CLEP for High School?

Some homeschooling parents find formulating a plan for homeschooling through high school a considerable challenge. Should our focus be on completing a comprehensive high school curriculum package? What about facing the college recruiter? What about spending money on costly umbrella schools that offer accredited diplomas?

These concerns drive some parents to plan hours of unnecessary course work that would hopefully lead to a diploma. Others choose educational paths that attempt to satisfy nagging doubts about future college entrance. Choosing to earn credits by examination solves all of these concerns, allowing us to chart an independent course that ultimately shows college recruiters that our students are ready for the next step.

What is CLEP?

CLEP is the "College-Level Examination Program" and is also known by terms such as "testing out" or "credit by examination." Simply put, you use independent study to prepare for a specific college course and then go to a local college to take the computerized multiple choice exam. If you
